Overview

The cost differential between Colombia and the United States is substantial across nearly every category. Colombia offers a premium lifestyle at a not-so-premium price. Many expats estimate their monthly expenses are roughly 50% to 60% of what they were before making the move to Colombia.

Colombia has so much to offer as a long-term residence—the economy is growing, and business sectors like internet providers. Living in Colombia typically costs between COP 2. 8% lower than in United. To calculate each city's Price Index value, we start by assigning a value of 100 to a central reference city (that happens to be Prague).
