

Indonesia Surabaya joins solar air conditioning

Overview

This study aims to design a solar-powered, recycled air conditioner prototype (Raycycle), tackling 3 pressing issues: high carbon emissions produced by traditional AC usage, low affordability of ACs and Indonesia's mountain of electronic waste. The Indonesia Solar Air Conditioning Market is witnessing rapid growth as demand for energy-efficient and sustainable cooling solutions rises across residential, commercial, and industrial sectors. Increasing electricity costs in Indonesia are pushing consumers and businesses to adopt solar-powered. Moreover, the primary method of electricity generation in Indonesia was coal, generating 58% of energy consumed, followed by natural gas (27%). The dominant use of fossil fuels can have serious negative impactson the environment. Utomodeck Group, through its Utomo SolaRUV division, has partnered with Sungrow Floating PV, a global leader in floating solar technology, to manufacture. In Indonesia which is located in the Sunbelt with abundant solar radiation, the environment is desirable for utilizing solar heating energy.
